Good Advice in Any Language.

Tennyson once attended a dinner where G. L. Craik proposed "The Ladies." In doing so he recalled the cynical advice given by a brother Scot to his children: "Tak my advice and dinna marry for siller. You can borrow cheaper." Some time later Tennyson, at his own table, repeated Mr. Craik's story, but expressed the idea without attempting dialect. His son Hallan remarked: "Surely, father, Craik did not use those words." "No, he did not. But the Craik is a Scotchman and I am afraid to venture on repeating him exactly. However, it's almost as good in English as in Scotch and it's tremendously true in both."

Where the Rainbow Ends.

Keep on dreamin'
When the storm descends,
Bright gold gleamin'
Where the rainbow ends!
An' you'll down yer troubles,
An' you'll hold yer friends,
When you pick up the dollars
Where the rainbow ends!

Prefers a Heavy Tombstone.

Mrs. Hanks—What sort of tombstone shall we get for dear mother—something elaborate or plain one?

Mr. Hanks—Well, I think something good and heavy will be best.—Cleveland Leader.

To Cleanse Gilt Frames.

To clean gilt frames, use a piece of soft sponge, warm water and soft soap. Obstinate spots may require a little diluted ammonia; but it is best to use soap only, if possible. Wash away all soap with clean, cold water, and put in a warm place to dry.

GREETING THAT WAS NEW.

Viennese Professor Worried Over American Expression.

"There are no more polite persons on earth than the Viennese," said Dr. D. L. Kahn, who spent five months in the Austrian capital, says the Indianapolis News. "You may meet a professor or a medical student, Viennese, half a dozen times in the course of an evening walk. Every time you meet off comes his hat with the words, 'Ich habe die ehre'—I have the honor—usually cut short to 'Habe die ehre,' spoken very quickly, so that in spite of the implicit politeness it is quite a perfunctory courtesy.

"One of the American students, a big fellow from California, with Yankee shrewdness, sizing this expression at what seemed to him its proper worth, used to meet it with an expression that was taken up by all the Americans. When he was accosted with 'Habe die ehre,' he would tip his hat and respond, 'Hot air, eh?' One day a venerable professor asked an explanation of me. 'What the devil does that fellow mean with his hot air-ye?' asked the professor. And I was impelled to say I really did not know."

Wasn't Quite Sure.

"How did you get on with your written examinations?" inquired a gentle friend of a young Hebrew who had been undergoing the ordeal prescribed for those who present themselves for the Jewish rite of confirmation. "Pretty good," replied the boy. "But I don't feel quite sure of all my answers." "What, for instance?" "Why, that one, 'How did Moses deliver the children of Israel?'" "Did you answer it?" "Oh, yes, I answered it." "What did you say?" "C. O. D."

Big Alaskan Bear.

Alaska is particularly rich in bears and most of them belong to a group known as the Alaskan brown bears, of which the Kodiak bear is one. So wide is his reputation that sportsmen from all over the world spend thousands of dollars in order to add a skin to their collection of trophies. The weight of a full grown Kodiak bear is not known, although specimens have been killed that were estimated to weigh between fifteen and eighteen hundred pounds, and some hunters claim that they will go as high as twenty-two hundred. While at Kodiak several summers ago I measured the skin of one of these huge animals which stretched the tape nine and a half feet from the nose to the tail, and ten and a half feet across the outstretched front paws. Mr. A. C. Goss, who handles all of the brown hands of the Alaskan Commercial Company at Kodiak, told me that he had seen skins that were three feet longer.—J. Alden Loring in Recreation.

Worship of Wells.

Worship of wells was everywhere common in England and Ireland before the days of Christianity. Even yet, in spite of the canons of St. Anselm, issued in 1102 against well worship, relics of it are found in some English and Irish neighborhoods. The third Sunday in May is known as Sugar-and-Water Sunday, it having been the custom for many centuries in the north of England to meet on that day at the wells in the neighborhood to drink sugar and water, a ceremony at which the village girls were supposed to be the hostesses of the young men. When this had been done the party generally went to the nearest inn, where the young men returned the hospitality they had received with cakes, ale and punch.

HE WANTED A WIFE.

Advertiser of a Century Ago Not Bashful About His Good Points.

She must be middle aged and good tempered widow, or a maid, and pur-suit of property, and I would far rather have a Wife that is ever so plain than a fine Lady that think herself handsome.

The Advertiser is not rich nor young, old nor poor, and in a very few years he will have a good income. Can be relied recommended for honesty, sobriety, and good tempered, and has no in-combrano, is very active, but not a tradesman, have been as Butler and Balliff for many years in most respectable families, and should I not be so lucky as to get me a wife, would be most willing to take a sittyehahan once more, would prefer living in the country, under stands Brewing feamosley, is well adapted for a inn or public house.

Please to direct W. W., 268, Berwick street, Oxford-road, or any Lady may call and have a interview with the widow that keeps the house, and say wher and when we can meet each other. My fameley ar verrey well off and welthey, far above the midling order.—Athenaeum, 1829.

Cannon Put to Peaceful Use.

The great Beaujolais wine district in France is said to "fairly bristle with cannon." The wine growers are firmly convinced of the efficacy of the cannon to destroy the hail in the clouds and turn it into a mild rain.

Obstacles Increase Love.

Because man is naturally a fighting animal, he loves to overcome difficulties and level obstacles. "The fruit at the top of the tree must be the best and sweetest," he argues, and so he yearns for the almost unattainable, and the more difficulties he conquers, the more branches he climbs, the more desirable, piquant, and lovable does the dangling fruit at the summit of the tree appear.

It is in human nature to highly value that which is hardly attained; hence, it is that a man's love is fed by the hindrances which are placed in his way.—Exchange.

To a Hat Thief.

You cannot steal a hat with impunity in New Zealand. Someone has dared to venture upon an exchange of headgear in our furthestmost Colony, the result being the insertion of the following "agony" in the local press:

"A Brand-new Felt Hat was 'exchanged' at a local hotel last Thursday, and has not been returned. If the present owner should escape harging, it is the late owner's devout wish that the lightning may strike through the hat into his miserable skull, and convince him that he is a low-down thief and a disgrace to an honest hat."—London Answers.
